Not illustrated. 1882 Excerpt: .to appropriate an excess of nutriment. Of these, the first is perhaps the most suggestive, but leaves in obscurity the unequal distribution of the hyperplasia. The second, a rather unsatisfactory suggestion, is opposed by the fact that the walls of the trunk which are directly formed from the middle lamina are comparatively seldom implicated. The third fails to explain cases in which the entire half of the body is affected. Lastly, the fourth and perhaps the oldest view, though less open to objection than the others, resembles the second in only removing the difficulty a step back, and gives us a new problem, the explanation of the abnormal greed of certain elementary parts. For the present the question must be left open until sounder data are afforded by future opportunities of pathological investigation. Case of congenital hypertrophy of the left lower extremity.--J. C--, a married woman, aet. 25, attended as an out-patient at St. Thomas s Hospital, in May, 1881. History.--From the time of the patient s earliest recollection, the left foot has been larger than the right. There is, however, no evidence as to the condition of the part at birth. Up to the age of twenty, the increase of the affected member was apparently in proportion to the general growth of the body. After this period and shortly after her marriage, she noticed a considerable enlargement of the leg, and soft tumour-like prominences appeared over the knee and upper part of the tibia. The...
