Excerpt: .it was thought wise to terminate that affiliation and to establish a more comprehensive preliminary course in the School, which should be given to all probationers; and to persuade as many prospective probationers as possible to take the course at Simmons before entering the Hospital, if they had not already studied elementary courses in the sciences, chemistry, etc. Amy P. Miller, a graduate of Johns Hopkins Hospital, who had taken a special course in the Department of Nursing and Health, Teachers College, was secured in September, 1910, as the first full-time instructor of the sciences. Having a full-time instructor made it possible to give the night nurses late afternoon classes, and to establish quiz classes on the doctors lectures and clinics. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer provided a course in Current Events in 1911 which was attended by the seniors and graduates. For two or three years afterwards, the graduates financed the course themselves and invited the seniors to attend. Like almost everything else that depends upon voluntary contributions, these lectures were unfortunately given up. An affiliation was made with the Wesson Maternity Hospital of Springfield, that offered the advantage of nursing private patients and enabled the School to discontinue the affiliation at the New York Lying-in Hospital. Bedside clinics in the pediatric and orthopedic wards were initiated; visits to other hospitals by the seniors, a course in Invalid Occupation and a course in Social Service were inaugurated during 1910 and 1911. In 1912, a most...
