They are armed with spines, or prickles, like the hedgehog. And some of them have a regular coat of mail. They may be said to be among the armed creatures of the Ocean. But the most curious part of their habits has yet to be told. The whole family have a means of defence such as we have not before met with. When one of them is alarmed it can puff its body out like a round ball. Then its spines stand up, and appear to its enemies like an array of Rpears. One of the globe-fishes is called Pennant s globe-fish, because it was discovered by a famous traveller of the name of Pennant. It has a crop a little...
