Excerpt: . . . 11 It is true that we have taken many actions over the last 2 years, and we might pat ourselves on the back and say we have done all that we can. But the reality is that we have not done all that we should be doing. Stopping the genocide now would be a relief to the Darfurians left alive. But it would be a cold message and comfort to the quar-ter of a million already killed and millions displaced and maimed. We saw the drawings of the children when we were there, and they showed very clearly the government planes in their drawings. They showed us machetes with blood dripping from them. We were told by the actual manager of the hotel that the Janjaweed would go in, and they wouldnt kill the people all at one time. They chopped their feet off. Then they would come back the next day and chop their arms off. And then they would leave them there to bleed to death. This is the kind of atrocity that is existing on our watch. So we might have a peace agreement, and it is the product of tireless diplomacy and fervent arm twisting. It is yet to be seen if it is also a product of true compromise. I hope that it is, but I fear it is an agreement built on sand, the product of not weary combatants desperate for peace but...
